FOR NATIONAL DEFENSE—

Quartermasters Keep Pace With Modern Warfare

BY MAJ. GEN. WM. H. MIDDLESWART
Chief Quartermaster, Hq., U. S. Army,
Europe

KEEPING abreast of the constant changes in modern warfare is a prime responsibility of every branch and service of the Armed Forces. The continual development of new weapons, new equipment and new techniques necessitates unceasing changes, versatility and ready adaptability. The Quartermaster Corps is not an exception in the implementation of this responsibility.

Maj. Gen. Middleswart

Quartermasters in the European Command—although thousands of miles from the Korean Conflict—continue to be affected by the lessons and experiences gained in that Theater of Operations. Here in Europe today we are carrying out our normal supply and service function, the primary responsibility of the Corps. In addition, we are engaged in two particular activities which give some indication of this trend in present-day warfare.

First of these and of utmost importance is a tactical training program for all Quartermaster personnel. The program, which originated last September, is based on the realization that Quartermasters should be as combat worthy as they are efficient in their supply and service responsibility. With the cooperation of Seventh Army Headquarters and the assistance of commands at all levels, the facilities at the largest tactical training center in Germany were made available to the Corps. Grafenwohr with its troop accommodations, miles of varied training grounds and excellent firing ranges, provides the ideal in training facilities.

While the tactical training plan was in staff study stages, a big factor or obstacle to overcome was the limited number of Quartermaster personnel in the Command plus an immense mission of supply and service. It was felt that if troops were withdrawn for tactical training the supplies and services would be necessarily neglected due to the shortage of personnel. However, since the paperwork stage, this has successfully been overcome, partly due to an increase of personnel and partly due to a closely coordinated scheduling of troops into the training area for the four-weeks' course.

As the tactical training program

Army Fires Atomic Gun In Public Test, Creates New Field Agency to Exploit It

A booming success in its first public test demonstration this week, the 280mm. atomic gun now is being integrated into the Army weapons system.

Technical details of the gun were reported in the 4 Oct. issue of THE JOURNAL. Three of the mammoth artillery pieces were fired with conventional ammunition on 15 Oct. at the Ordnance Corps test center, Aberdeen Proving Ground, Md. The Army is understood to have about 10 of the guns, enough so that allocation of some already has been made to Army Field Forces.

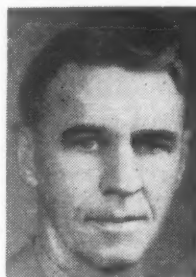

To make certain that the Army's largest caliber artillery piece with complete mobility and other atomic weapons and guided missiles are exploited with maximum efficiency, General J. Lawton Collins, Army Chief of Staff, has directed establishment of a Combat Developments Agency at headquarters of Army Field Forces, Ft. Monroe, Va.

General John R. Hodge, AFF Chief, has named his deputy, Maj. Gen. Robert M. Montague, an artilleryman, to direct Combat Developments at AFF Headquarters and in field installations, such as the Guided Missile Center at Ft. Bliss, Tex.

Activation of the Combat Developments Agency was announced on 12 Oct., three days before the 280mm. gun, capable of firing conventional or atomic projectiles for 20 miles, was thunderously unveiled in a public demonstration at Aberdeen, at which General Montague was present.

Coincidentally, it was disclosed that the gun is now being delivered to Army Field Forces.

This means that Ordnance Corps technical tests, such as have been going on at Aberdeen and which are certain to continue at that key Ordnance facility and elsewhere, have progressed so satisfactorily that the weapon can be employed in tactical tests.

Navy to Select First Wave Commanders Since 1949

For the first time since 1949, the Navy will select Wave officers for promotion to the rank of commander, THE JOURNAL learned this week.

The disclosure followed an official announcement that a board to name Navy Line officers for promotion to that rank will be convened on 28 Oct. THE JOURNAL had previously reported, in the 4 Oct. issue, that the 28 Oct. date was under consideration, and that speculation had arisen regarding the possible selection of Waves.

Although the Bureau of Naval Personnel did not disclose the number of either male officers or Waves to be selected, the promotion zone is the smallest zone to be established for many years, and observers believe this indicates the size of the group to be selected will be equally small. The zone includes only 86 officers, and extends from Lt. Comdr. Charles F. Vance (Signal Number 6588 in the 1952 Register) to Lt. Comdr. Charles L. Anceney (Signal Number 6674).

Also eligible, however, are all lieutenant commanders who will have four or more years service in grade on 1 July 1953, computed from date of rank. This includes the eight top Wave lieutenant commanders. No women have been selected for commander since 1949 when the first four women, including the present Wave head Capt. Joy Hancock, were named for that rank.

Reserve officers who are eligible are

Incentive Pay Study

The Department of Defense Incentive Pay Commission, which met for the first time at the Pentagon on 10 Oct., has not set a date for a second session, a Pentagon spokesman said late this week.

The Commission is under the chairmanship of Lewis L. Strauss, who is a rear admiral in the Naval Reserve. Its military staff director is Rear Adm. J. L. Womble, USN, who is on duty in the office of Assistant Secretary of Defense Anna M. Rosenberg.

Army Temp. Promotions

The Army is expected to announce next week the temporary promotions of about 50 lieutenant colonels to colonel and approximately 100 majors to lieutenant colonel.

And the week after, present plans call for about 100 temporary promotions to major and 200 to captain.

This will mean a total of 450 temporary promotions during October—less than one-half of the number made during August and September.

The likelihood now is that the reduced rate of promotions will continue in November, but a firm forecast is not possible until end-of-October strength reports are reviewed.

Commands Sig. Bn. in Korea

Lt. Col. Finis G. Johnson has assumed command of the 51st Signal Battalion I Corps, in Korea. He attended the Command and General Staff College, Ft. Leavenworth, Kans., before arriving in Korea.

Better Standard of Living Abroad Asked

Secretary of the Air Force Thomas K. Finletter, back from an extended trip to air bases around the world, this week called for action to alleviate the hardships of military personnel overseas.

He told a Pentagon press conference that at a number of bases "our people are living under conditions distinctly below what they should be required to accept."

It is certain that between now and the time Congress convenes, an inter-Service plan to improve living conditions overseas will be formulated and submitted to Congress in the form of an authorization for public works construction. Although Mr. Finletter referred only to the problem at air bases, it is known that personnel at many military and naval installations are also denied suitable housing and recreation.

Therefore, in view of Secretary Finletter's forthright statement of needs, it can be expected a concerted effort will be launched in the 83d Congress to "do better" by men and women in uniform.

A JOURNAL reporter asked Secretary Finletter if the Air Force intends to seek funds from Congress for construction of new dependent quarters overseas. He replied, that in addition to improving substandard facilities for military personnel, more housing should be provided for dependents.

The Air Force for the past several years has emphasized it was placing priority on the construction of operational facilities, such as runways, and consequently would be forced to delay building satisfactory housing and recreational accommodations.

Mr. Finletter now feels that the time has come to do better by military personnel on duty at overseas bases.

Said the Air Force Secretary: "I am proposing that the new Congress, when it convenes, should re-examine the whole question of what constitutes a proper standard of living for Air Force personnel stationed abroad during the Cold War, which can be extremely cold during a European winter and almost unbearably hot during a North African summer."

Secretary Finletter stressed that he is "not asking that their accommodations be on an imperial scale. I am only asking that the near subhuman standards prevailing in certain areas be banished by the provision of adequate housing and more recreational facilities."

"Adequate housing and recreational facilities," he continued, "generate high reenlistment rates. The training of our technicians is an expensive process. Consequently, I believe that the provision of adequate facilities is a required economy move."

Red Attacks Slow Down Under Blasts From UN Troops, Planes, and Warships

THE Communist offensive slowed down perceptively the early part of this week as United Nations forces re-took White Horse Hill and stormed over the crest of Triangle Hill, two sectors in the Chorwon area which had been heavily contested, but picked up again by mid-week as the enemy launched fierce counter-attacks.

By Tuesday, the Chinese Reds had been blasted from their last hold on White Horse by troops of the South Korean 9th Division, and probing attacks in the western, central and east-central sectors had been repulsed. Although the enemy suffered enormous casualties in the onslaughts against UN lines, they continued to fight doggedly. Counter-attacks were either underway or being awaited at numerous points all along the line.

In Tokyo, General Mark W. Clark's headquarters announced that a diversion had been created on the Korean east coast by use of a mock amphibious attack employing thousands of U. S. soldiers. Naval and Air Force planes supported the attack force but no actual landing was planned or carried out.

7th Division Wins Hill

Troops of the U. S. 7th Division reached the crest of Triangle Hill and advance units attacked slowly down its northern slope with Chinese Reds battling savagely in the close-quarter fighting. Other elements of the division's 31st Regiment dug in on the crest in anticipation of one of the repeated counter-attacks which the enemy keeps throwing back.

As THE JOURNAL went to press, a counter-attack by 800 of the enemy had forced the Regiment to give up one of its newly-captured positions. With the fighting in its third day on Triangle, it was estimated that the Communists had suffered 10,000 casualties in the area and still appeared to be moving in replacements.

The fighting on White Horse moved into its second week with the ROK division using high explosives to rip the enemy from their three remaining positions. South Korean engineers tunneled under the positions to plant land mines. After withdrawing, they detonated the charges and, while the enemy was still stunned, rushed in with bared bayonets. The first position was taken easily, the second in about four hours and the last one after a two-hour fight. Counter-attacks continued in force here, also.

In other sectors, Eighth Army troops were meeting heavy fighting by mid-week in attacks against the Chinese portion of Sniper Ridge to the northeast, and against Finger Ridge, west of the Pukhan River. The enemy early in the week surrounded an advance position at Christmas Hill, west of the Mundung Valley, but counter-attacking reinforcements drove them back within a matter of hours.

Air Support

Air Force planes topped the 1,000-sortie mark two days in a row while striking against Communist communications, troops and supply targets. Numerous buildings were destroyed and a hand grenade factory at Pyongyang was assaulted in the raids.

Fighter-bombers flew hundreds of interdiction and close-support sorties, destroying and damaging enemy buildings and knocking out enemy gun positions and bunkers along the front lines. Penetrating deep into enemy territory, F-84 Thunder jets knocked out spans in two rail bridges south of Kanggye.

Naval aircraft from Task Force 77 carried out reconnaissance and close support missions from the decks of the carriers Kearsarge, Essex and Princeton. Their bombs, rockets and strafing fire destroyed enemy bunkers, killed troops and damaged or destroyed vehicles and buildings.

The Bon Homme Richard joined the force on Sunday to add approximately 100 planes to the offensive potential of the carrier force. British pilots from the carrier HMS Ocean also struck at targets from Haeju to north of Chinnampo.

Los Angeles Returns

Another U. S. ship returning to the battle area was the heavy cruiser USS Los Angeles, which destroyed numerous large and small bunkers, an observation post and 100 yards of trench during her fast day back. The cruisers Helena and Toledo also operated against east coast targets, assisted by five destroyers, the Perkins, Tingey, Craig, Lewis and Bausell. They laid harassing fire on gun positions, trucks, roads and bunkers in the Kojo area and fired at interdiction targets south of Kosong.

Surface ships on both coasts of Korea were under enemy shore fire during the period. The destroyer Lewis, operating near Wonsan, was straddled by 84 shells from gun positions. She retaliated with over 300 shells, and smoke and fire erupted from the enemy battery. Some minesweepers were prevented from sweeping operations by the heavy enemy gunfire.

On 16 Oct., the Navy disclosed that Communist shore battery fire had killed one crewman and wounded 21 others aboard the Perkins and the minesweeper Osprey in separate actions off Korea's east coast. Neither ship suffered more than superficial damage.

The Perkins, which was the first Navy ship to qualify for combat pay recently, was straddled by 120mm fire while engaged in bombardment operations north of Kojo on 13 Oct. Two near misses off her port beam killed one man and wounded 17. The Osprey received minor damage from shrapnel while operating off the port of Wonsan, also on 13 Oct. Four men were wounded.

Atomic Artillery

What this weapon will mean to the Army was forecast by Secretary Frank Pace, Jr., who spoke to reporters, industrial representatives and military experts at the Aberdeen show. "This artillery piece," he said, "opens up new vistas in the capabilities of our Army to discharge its primary responsibilities in the field of combat."

Secretary Pace said the new gun "provides our ground commanders with fire support of great range, flexibility and volume, which can be delivered with extreme accuracy and reliability at any time of the day or night regardless of zero ceilings, storm, hail or other conditions."

"In my view," the Secretary added, "this atomic weapon can prove to be one of the vital factors in helping to force decisive results on the battlefield."

General Collins, who also viewed the spectacular show at the Ordnance Corps Center, took note of charges in some quarters that the Army was trying to "muscle in" on atomic developments. The Army Chief of Staff strongly rejected this allegation and insisted that the Army would have been "derelict in its duty" if development of the atomic gun had not been initiated long ago—actually as early as 1944.

General Collins said the Army considered the 280mm. artillery piece, "neither as an interim or ultimate weapon." He said the Army was not satisfied wholly with the caliber or range of the weapon.

This was reiterated by Secretary Pace, as he said: "Let me make it perfectly clear that I do not believe that this weapon is final or that it is, in and of itself, compelling."

"With the completion of this Army atomic weapon," he continued, "there is more need than ever for a continuing and objective reappraisal of the concepts, doctrines and techniques of ground warfare. Realizing fully that the ultimate decisions of war relate to battle on the ground, the Army accepts the responsibility for gaining such decisions at minimum cost, primarily in human lives and secondarily in other national resources."

The reappraisal of ground warfare in the light of atomic weapons progress—most immediately the availability of a gun capable of firing atomic projectiles—will be the responsibility of the new Combat Developments Agency.

Major Changes

The major changes to effect the new Combat Developments Agency are:

1. The establishment of a small staff of specialists in General Montague's office at Fort Monroe.
2. The addition of a combat development division in the G-3 (Training) Section of the Office of the Chief of Army Field Forces.
3. Establishment of an atomic weapons and radiological warfare division in the Research and Development Section of Office, Chief of Army Field Forces.
4. Establishment of a Special Weapons director with a small staff to act as the field agency for atomic weapons developments and tests.
5. Activation of the First Guided Missiles Brigade at Fort Bliss, Texas, to provide the necessary troops for training in the use of and for the physical field testing of new developments in guided missiles.
6. Establishment of combat developments departments in the Command and General Staff College and in the Army's combat arms schools.

Tasks Assigned

Specifically, the following tasks will be undertaken by the new agency:

1. Formulation of new warfare doctrine to insure the most effective use of new equipment as it is developed and becomes available for use by the Army.
2. Preparation of military characteristics (desired performance standards) for new weapons and equipment and initiation of the actual development of such weapons and equipment needed in the application of the new doctrine developed or that are required to most effectively implement present doctrine.
3. The coordination of new doctrine and equipment developed and the integration of these new concepts and means into present tactical doctrine, weapons systems and unit organizations to improve the Army's capability of waging war.
4. Field testing of new doctrine and equipment, which is developed, by the use of troop units of appropriate size.
5. Full utilization of civilian scientists where their knowledge can assist in developing new doctrine and equipment.
6. Coordination of the doctrine developed by the Army's school system with practical application in field tests conducted by existing Army Field Forces and other Boards.
7. Changes in the organizational structure of military units necessitated by equipment or doctrine changes.

In addition to Secretary Pace and General Collins, others who spoke at the Aberdeen demonstration included Maj. Gen. E. L. Ford, Chief of Ordnance, and Brig. Gen. J. L. Holman, Commanding General, Aberdeen Proving Ground.

Among the senior military officials attending the demonstration were Lt. Gen. Willis D. Crittendon, Commanding General, First Army, Governors Island, N. Y.; Lt. Gen. Edward H. Brooks, Commanding General, Second Army, Ft. Meade, Md.; and Lt. Gen. Anthony C. McAuliffe, Assistant Chief of Staff, G-1; and Maj. Gen. Floyd L. Parks, Army Chief of Information.

The day after the Aberdeen tests, General Collins spoke on 16 Oct. at the Carnegie Institute Society in Pittsburgh and made the following statement concerning atomic energy on the battlefield:

"By far the most dramatic progress in the Army's use of new weapons and scientific developments lies in our efforts to exploit the use of atomic weapons on the battlefield, and to prepare to defend against them."

"The Army today is engaged in an extensive program to adapt itself to atomic warfare and to prepare both offensively and defensively for the impact of atomic weapons. We are providing field commanders with technical information; our troops are being trained to protect themselves against atomic blasts; and our service schools now give courses in atomic warfare."

"We have concentrated on the speedy development of an atomic artillery piece, because our problem lies in being able to place fissionable materials relatively close to our own front-line troops under all conditions of weather and visibility and sometimes on very fleeting targets of opportunity. It is a means of delivery which has been completely proven over many years, and it is the first means of battle field delivery under all weather conditions which we can get in the hands of troops. This 280mm gun can fire with accuracy comparable to conventional artillery at the relatively short ranges, and it is four times more accurate at the longer ranges. It is a weapon that gives us the accuracy and dependability we must have."

"This artillery piece, which incidentally has the versatility of being able to fire both conventional and atomic shells, is not much larger than some of our World War II guns and has even greater mobility. It can cross bridges capable of carrying any standard piece of equipment in an ordinary Army division. Moreover, it can travel at a rate of 35 miles per hour, has excellent cross-country mobility, and can disembark over unprepared beaches from a Navy Landing Utility Ship. Once it reaches a designated firing location, it can be emplaced and put into action with greater speed than any other heavy field artillery piece now in use. And the gun is so well balanced that one man can easily elevate or depress it by hand in the event that the power unit should fail. The development of this fine weapon would not have been possible without the splendid cooperation of the Atomic Energy Commission, other civilian scientists, and American industry."

"Ultimately, as guided missiles are perfected, they will also aid in delivering fissionable materials by the Army in close support of Army forces. But the important thing is that we have the gun now. We want our field commanders to have the capability of being able to use atomic explosives safely and accurately in darkness or in bad weather if it should become necessary."

Signal OCS

Class 15 of OCS at Ft. Monmouth, N. J., graduated 54 Signal Corps officers at commencement exercises and a formal parade 25 Sept., with Col. R. P. Lyman, Chief of Staff at the Post, presenting commissions to graduates of the Officer Candidate Department. Maj. Gen. Homer W. Kiefer, commanding general of the 9th Infantry Division at Ft. Dix, N. J., addressed the newly commissioned second lieutenants during graduation ceremonies.

As in previous groups, distinguished graduates were selected and given the choice of applying for Regular Army commissions. In Class 15, five men were named. They are 2d Lts. Lee R. Whitlock of North Sacramento, Calif.; Oliver H. White, Springfield, Ill.; Frank G. Sieraski of Ironwood, Mich.; Frank D. Henry of Chicago, and Frederick J. Bove of Oceanside, Calif.

Col. Van Wyk to S.F. POE

Col. Harry Van Wyk, former Deputy Chief of the Transportation Division, USA, Europe, has left Germany for new assignment at the San Francisco Port of Embarkation. He had served in Germany since July 1949.

those who reported for active duty prior to 1 July this year, and who will have four or more years service in grade on 1 July 1953. The promotion zone terminates with Lt. Comdr. Cook Cleland (Register Number 20146 in the 1 April '51 Reserve Register).

At the same time, the Navy said a board will meet in January 1953 to consider Regular Line officers for transfer to the Supply Corps. The board will consider requests from officers in ranks up to and including lieutenant commander and requests should be submitted, via commanding officers, to reach BuPers (Attn Pers B111H) prior to 15 Dec.

Pentagon Pressed to Name Manpower Commission

Senator Lyndon Johnson (D-Tex.), chairman of the Senate Preparedness Subcommittee, has written Secretary of Defense Robert A. Lovett to inquire about the status of the Manpower Commission, which was first proposed on 7 July.

During recent weeks, THE JOURNAL has reported the difficulty which the Department is experiencing in obtaining the services of "eminent and qualified citizens" to investigate the utilization of manpower in the Armed Forces.

The fact that this is an election year undoubtedly has contributed to the problem.

Secretary Lovett already has issued a charter for the 11-member Manpower Commission, complete text of which was published in the 23 August issue of THE JOURNAL.

Maj. Gen. Merrill B. Twining, USMC, has been named staff director for the Commission, but so far there has been no announcement of the members, seven to be civilians and four to be retired military officers, a general officer or flag officer of the Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps.

Undoubtedly, Secretary Lovett will announce shortly the membership of the Commission. A Marine Corps official directive states that the first meeting of the Commission is expected to occur this month. If this is true, the name of the chairman and members of the Commission will be announced momentarily.

Following is the text of Senator Johnson's letter to Secretary Lovett:

Text of Letter

"My dear Mr. Secretary:

"On 7 July the Senate Preparedness Committee issued its Fortieth Report, in which we recommended that the Defense Department establish 'a group of eminent and qualified citizens' to study the problem of more efficient and economical use of military personnel. On 15 July you replied in a letter expressing complete agreement with the proposal and stating that you would proceed to select the members of the Commission.

"It is now 7 October and upon the basis of recent inquiries I understand that no members of this group have been selected or appointed. Indeed, I have run into disquieting reports that strong opposition to the proposal exists within your Department to bringing in 'outsiders' who might change established procedures.

"In fact, it has been reliably reported that an important group within your organization has said that a manpower study commission will be appointed 'only as a last resort and under extreme pressure.'

"Since better manpower utilization appears to hold forth the only hope of reducing swollen defense budgets, I would very much appreciate from you a report on the progress that has been made in establishing this manpower study commission. I am aware of your personal sympathy with this proposal and I trust that we will be able to produce concrete results in the near future.

"Sincerely,

"Lyndon B. Johnson, Chairman
"Preparedness Investigating Subcommittee."

Retired Pay Computation

The Comptroller General ruled this week that the retired rank and therefore the retired pay of an officer is determined by his election or non-election under Section 415 of the Career Compensation Act of 1949, as amended, to receive disability retirement benefits computed under the laws in effect on 30 Sept. 1949.

The official digest of the decision (B-103063) affecting Lt. Comdr. William A. Leonard, USN-Ret., and others in the same category, is as follows:

"An officer selected for promotion whom a clinical board had found to be suffering from a disease prior to a physical examination given to effect such promotion and whose subsequent disability retirement was for the same disease may not, under section 402 (d) of the Career Compensation Act of 1949, be advanced to the grade for which selected and receive the retired pay of that grade, as said section authorizes an officer's disability retirement pay to be computed on the rank to which he is eligible for promotion only if the physical disability is found to exist as a result of a physical examination given in connection with effecting a permanent promotion."

FEC Changes Policy For Dependent Housing-Travel

The Far East Command has issued a lengthy statement describing changes in the policy for dependent travel and housing in Japan.

The announcement—text herewith—follows disclosure in the 20 Sept. issue of THE JOURNAL that a limitation of 500 families per month has been placed on dependent travel to the Far East Command.

A Pentagon official said last month that the wait for availability of government quarters in Japan now extends from nine to 15 months.

FEC officials said the basic change in policy is from travel to Japan based on availability of housing anywhere in Japan to a policy of travel to Japan based upon availability of housing at or near the duty station of the sponsor. In addition to this basic change, the new program provides for decentralization of control to commanding officers of U. S. installations in Japan.

Each Service will control housing at its own installations. Sponsors of one service who are stationed at an installation of another service will be handled under the same provisions as personnel of the parent service on that installation. In the Tokyo-Yokohama-Atsugi-Zama area, where many personnel of more than one Service must be housed at one installation, the housing has been divided in proportion to the strength of each service in order to insure equality of treatment for personnel of all three services. Installation commanders will soon be able to furnish the approximate waiting time for their respective areas.

New Method for Priority Lists

"Sponsors desiring to bring their dependents to Japan will submit travel and housing applications to their respective camp, post or base commander who will arrange the applications in order of priority according to the length of separation of the family. Information is transposed to an individual card for each sponsor which is then submitted to Headquarters FEC. Each two weeks the station commander will report to FEC the number of projected vacant houses for which families can be brought to Japan on the next priority list to be submitted. Headquarters FEC will then publish travel priority lists from the cards which have been submitted in order to bring dependents to Japan for housing at or near the duty station of the sponsor and in accordance with the period of separation of the family.

"Due to the great difference which would result in waiting times at various Army installations because of difference in the number of houses as compared to the number of eligible sponsors at those installations, the Army has allocated a percentage of housing for voluntary interim housing at four Army installations: Gifu, Otsu, Nara and Eta Jima. In order to alleviate the critical housing situation on Hokkaido, personnel stationed on that island will be authorized dependent housing at Camp Haugen and Misawa Air Force Base. At each of the latter two camps, a percentage of housing has been set aside as housing for dependents of sponsors stationed on Hokkaido. The Air Force and Navy have been authorized to establish interim housing at installations under their control if they so desire. Air Force personnel stationed at Misawa are also eligible to apply for Army interim housing elsewhere. It was emphasized that personnel on any priority travel list subsequent to the October B list will be brought to Japan for interim housing only on a strictly voluntary basis.

No Change for Eligibility

"There is no change in the eligibility for dependent housing. Eligibles continue to be officers, enlisted men in the top three pay grades and authorized civilians with the Armed Forces of grades GS-12 and above.

"Personnel who are now in interim housing, or who travel on priority lists up to and including the October B list and go into interim housing, will be moved into permanent housing in accordance with the period of separation of the families, considering interim housing as continued separation. Personnel who arrive for voluntary interim housing will also be brought into permanent housing in accordance with the period of separation from families. It was emphasized that the housing situation in Japan continues to be acute, with only 40 per cent of the required housing being available; some of this housing is in areas where it cannot best be utilized because of current troop locations.

"Present lists up to and including the October B list will fill up all housing becoming vacant between now and 31 December 1952. The first priority list under the new plan will be the January A list for travel after 1 January 1953.

Spaces for Korea Returnees

"Korean returnees will continue to be integrated on travel lists; using experience factors as a basis, each post will reserve spaces on the new priority lists for Korea returnees.

"There has been no change in the requirement that an individual must have 12 months service remaining on his current overseas tour or have an approved agreement for an extension to include at least 12 months service after the arrival date of his dependents.

"No change has been made in the private rental policy. The acceptance of a private rental to bring dependents to Japan prior to availability of government housing does not affect the individual's position on the permanent housing list. It was emphasized that those personnel availing themselves of early travel based on a private rental or of private rental in lieu of interim housing must have had the private rental facility approved by the installation commander for structural and sanitary standards.

"As in the past, dependents traveling on a non-priority basis (those who are to live in a private rental) receive orders to travel at government expense the same as if they were traveling on a priority shipment.

"Dependents moving on priority travel are authorized air transportation when the family includes an infant between the age of 6 weeks and 5 months. However, dependents on the non-priority basis, with an infant under 6 months, cannot travel until the infant is six months old as travel is by water transportation.

Early Application for Passport Urged

"The actual port call for dependents to report to either San Francisco or Seattle will be issued after the Seattle Port of Embarkation has received the passports. Sponsors applying for their dependents' travel are urged to encourage their families to apply for passports immediately upon receipt of travel authorization so as to avoid unnecessary delays. The travel authorization is air mailed directly to sponsor's dependent by Headquarters, FEC.

"Primary responsibilities for dependent travel and housing at the 29 installations throughout Japan are as follows:

"Army — Crawford, Haugen, Youngfarms, Sendai, Drew, Tokyo, Yokohama, McGill, Zama, Gifu, Nara, Otsu, Kobe, Eta Jima, Hakata, Mower, Wood and Chickamauga.

"Air Force — Misawa, Johnson, Yokota, Tachikawa, Nagoya, Bofu, Iwakuni, Miho, Ashiya and Itazuke.

"Navy—Yokosuka."

Army Chief of Staff Tells Operation Research Mission

Its activities long shrouded in secrecy, the Army's Operations Research Office this week received public attention as a result of an address made on 16 Oct. by General J. Lawton Collins.

The ORO is known to be having an important influence on major Army policies and it is to be expected that General Collins' remarks will prompt further inquiries about this activity.

The Army Chief of Staff told the Carnegie Institute Society in Pittsburgh that the ORO, headed by Dr. Ellis A. Johnson and operated under contract with Johns Hopkins University, now numbers more than 120 research personnel. The ORO, said General Collins, "integrates the resources of many of the universities and industrial research organizations of the United States for direct work on new weapons and for the analysis of problems of the training ground and the battlefield."

General Collins continued: "Our research is not limited to the physical sciences. We are also making the best use of the great advances in the social sciences because we fully realize the importance of the human element in combat."

"The Operations Research Office and its many collaborating universities participate directly with the officers of our General Staff in the most critical analysis of the Army's operations. This honest soul-searching is designed to bring about the utmost efficiency as well as economy in the management of the Army and without regard to military or civilian perspective—the truth is our only aim. We seek thereby to choose the most modern and effective weapons for the battlefield, which at the same time can be produced at the minimum cost and with the least impact on our national economy. We seek also to ensure that our Army personnel are trained by the most modern methods developed in educational research, and that their morale and psychological well-being—as well as physical well-being—are protected and preserved throughout their service in the Army. Above all, we seek to guarantee that the combination of men and machines for combat makes full use of modern scientific knowledge so as to ensure victory with the least cost in American lives.

"This is the general form of our organization for correlating the efforts of the scientist, the technician, the educator, and the soldier in this modern age," General Collins concluded.

The Cadets meet Pittsburgh at West Point today after bouncing back from their loss to USC to take an amazing 37-7 win over Dartmouth last Saturday. Chalking up 450 yards—almost equally divided between the air and ground—Army cracked across the goal line five times, completed five perfect conversions, and added a safety for good measure.

Sophomore quarterback Pete Vann scored the first Army touchdown by diving over the goal, and Lowell Sisson took a 10-yard pass from Vann to add the second Army score. In the second period, Mario Delucia ran 13 yards to tally, and Fred Attaya made the final two Army scores—the first on a 66-yard pass play from Vann. Attaya caught the ball on the Dartmouth 25 and ran the remaining distance. His second score came after an 18-yard gallop.

Double Compensation Ruling

The Comptroller General ruled this week that the double compensation restriction does not affect a retired Army officer employed by a private corporation seized by the Government under the Trading with the Enemy Act of 1917, as amended.

The official digest of the decision (B-110491) follows:

"The term 'any corporation' as used in the double compensation restriction provisions of section 212 of the act of June 30, 1932, as amended, contemplates corporations which properly may be regarded as instrumentalities of the United States and does not embrace wholly private corporations which have been seized by the Government under the Trading with the Enemy Act of 1917, as amended, and therefore, said section 212 is not applicable to a retired Army officer who accepts a position with a corporation which has been seized and is being operated by the United States under the Trading with the Enemy Act of 1917, as amended, at a salary in excess of $3,000 per annum."

Heads Benning Unit

QM in Europe

emerged from planning stages, ten selected Quartermaster officers were detailed to duty with tactical units for six weeks. Their mission was to observe training methods, gather data on squad and platoon tactical doctrine and generally to prepare themselves for the task of developing a comprehensive and realistic 176-hour tactical training program for Quartermaster troops. These ten officers, plus a Headquarters and Headquarters Detachment of a Quartermaster Battalion, provide the training personnel nucleus of the Quartermaster training center. Since the first 350 troops from two Quartermaster depots moved into the area to start their training cycle, thousands of Quartermaster personnel have completed the course. The goal, to be reached in the not too distant future, is for every Quartermaster in the Command to have undergone this training.

Training Details Told

Of what does the training consist and is it realistic? A look at the subjects and practical exercises is enlightening. The training program totals 176 hours or four weeks of 44 hours each. A general breakdown of the training schedule includes eight hours' indoctrination, eleven hours of general military subjects, 108 hours for combat skills, and 49 hours for weapons instruction and firing. Each four-week cycle culminates with an extensive field problem. Troops are tested with their basic weapon, automatic weapon crews are appointed and qualified, and all other personnel fire automatic weapons for familiarization. Rocket launchers, both 3.5" and 2.36", are fired with practice high explosive and white phosphorus ammunition. Techniques of fire and combat firing are accomplished on transition ranges which are run over realistic battle terrain. Instruction and testing in map reading, scouting and patrolling, squad and platoon offensive and defensive tactics, plus terrain evaluation, are all a part of the training course. All these activities take place with the background noise of tactical Army and Corps artillery batteries firing TOT (time on target) barrages, the chatter of automatic weapons' fire, the sharp crack of recoilless weapon fire, and the endless scream and blast of mortar fire.

Bitter Lessons From Korea

As for the second Quartermaster endeavor—victory in modern warfare depends more than ever upon the availability of the right supplies at the right place at the right time. Korea has taught bitter lessons in the price of broken supply lines. The idea of airdrops is simple and it has worked well in the past. However, principles under which they are staged today in practice must be perfected continuously so that tomorrow, next week, or next decade the expediency of the newest and fastest regular means of supply will prove the practice was well worth the attention and efforts of all.

Today in Europe the 557th QM Aerial Supply Company is undergoing constant training in supplying the diversified items required in combat. Yesterday they jumped with a load of sections of an M4-A2 Bridge. They assisted a group of Engineers in receiving the bridge and unloading the sections. They retrieved the aerial delivery equipment for re-use as they would in combat if at all possible. Tomorrow they will jump with artillery pieces in support of an Infantry Division's mock attack on enemy fortifications.

As recent as July 1950 the first Quartermaster participation in airborne service supply operations took place with the organization of the Quartermaster Airborne Air Supply and Packaging Detachment. Within a year after activation the unit was in Korea where it distinguished itself in such actions as air dropping 265 tons of supplies in one day (with 24-hour notice) to the Marines at Chosen Reservoir.

The experience of this group in the Far

East Command has proven conclusively that aerial supply delivery increases the speed and flexibility with which commanders can accomplish their objectives. Natural barriers can be circumvented; isolated, displaced, or fast moving forward units can be supplied in an organized and thorough way; and quick shifts in the line no longer need to prove disastrous.

So now in Europe with the ever intensified tactical training of all Quartermaster supply troops plus the continuous efforts to perfect delivery of supplies by air, Quartermasters are attempting to keep pace with the type of modern warfare that sets a stride exceeded only by the fast moving world in which we live.

Gen. Shepherd To Present Third MarDiv Colors

General Lemuel C. Shepherd, Jr., Commandant of the Marine Corps, disclosed this week that he will fly to Camp Pendleton, Calif., early next month to present the Third Marine Division with its colors.

In a press conference, following his return from a tour of Pacific installations, the Commandant said the Third Marine Division is now completely activated, the last regimental combat team being formed last month. The color presentation ceremony will take place at Pendleton on 7 Nov.

General Shepherd's Far Eastern tour was conducted as part of a working philosophy that both he and his staff "should get to see as many Marines as possible at all posts and stations throughout the year." Accompanied by other high-ranking officers from Marine Corps Headquarters, he visited Alaska, Japan, Korea, Formosa, the Philippines, Guam, Kwajalein and Hawaii.

The new Marine Corps Air Station at Kaneohe Bay, T. H., has proved very successful, General Shepherd said, and flyers there have been able to put in an unusual amount of flying time due to the excellent weather conditions. He noted that a regimental combat team from Camp Pendleton will be dispatched to the base sometime next spring. The Corps only recently took over Ft. Hase, a 795-acre military reservation formerly belonging to the Army which adjoins the Kaneohe MCAS, and General Shepherd said some of the present facilities of the base will be renovated for use by Marine ground troops.

The First Marine Division, General Shepherd observed, "is in the finest shape I have ever seen it." He added that two years of living in the field has sharpened the troops' ability to put every phase of their Marine training to good use. Morale is "high everywhere," he said.

The Marine Commandant noted that the men "have a very professional air about them which I thought was commendatory." He said Marine cooperation with the Army "is very good" and that "combat efficiency—the essence of what we strive for in the Marine Corps—was aptly demonstrated by last month's intense fighting at Bunker Hill."

Conditions in the First Marine Air Wing, he said, "are similar to those in the division. The troops are in excellent condition and I was particularly impressed with their appearance." He said the Wing is flying "the bulk of close air support for the Eighth Army," and that both General Mark W. Clark and General James A. Van Fleet had expressed their full support "for our methods of close air support." Marines, he added, are being used also on interdiction missions, and these "are making their impact felt more than they ever have in the past."

Discussing selective service inductees now serving with the Marines, General Shepherd came to their "full defense." He said they are no different "as far as their fighting abilities and their approach to the service is concerned" than Marines obtained through recruiting. He added, however, that recruits "pay off better" because they are retained for a longer period of time after they have completed their training, and that the reenlistment rate is higher among the volunteers.

While touring the front, General Shepherd wore one of the new "bullet-proof" vests which he said are now mandatory for all men in the line and those likely to be exposed to shell fire.

Queried about his new working relationship with the Joint Chiefs of Staff, the Marine Commandant said it was a "very amicable" one and that the Marine Corps is "very happy with the way it is working out." He noted that he now attends JCS meetings about three times a week.

Increase Marine Quotas

Quotas for meritorious promotion to the grades of corporal and sergeant in the Marine Corps have been increased by two per cent.

When first established this year, the quotas were set at four per cent for promotion to sergeant and five per cent for promotion to corporal. These have now been upped to six per cent for sergeant and seven per cent for corporal.

Under the authority for meritorious promotions, commanding officers who are empowered to convene NCO promotion boards are also authorized to promote deserving Marines at their own discretion, "for exceptional performance of duty."

If a unit is authorized 200 corporals, application of the annual percentage quota results in a numerical quota of 14 promotions which the CO is authorized to make during the period 1 July '52 through 30 June '53.

Gen. Bethel Commands MCDS

Brig. Gen. Ion M. Bethel, USMC, is the new Commanding General, Marine Corps Depot of Supplies, Philadelphia, which procures all of the Marine body armor now going to troops in Korea.

General Bethel was promoted to his new rank on 1 Oct., after serving temporarily as commanding officer of the Depot.

"Wind, Storm & Rain"

Lt. Comdr. Denning Miller, USNR, is the author of a new book "Wind, Storm, and Rain," treating meteorology in easily understood terms. An air navigator in World War II, Commander Miller wrote basic manuals for naval air training on navigation, contact flying, and map reading. His book is published by Coward-McCann, Inc., of New York.

Navy Wins Third Game

Navy will play one of its most important games of the season today against a strong University of Maryland team after taking its third straight win of the year last Saturday.

By defeating William and Mary, 14-0, during Homecoming activities at the Academy last week-end, the Midshipmen added proof to the suspicion that they will give Maryland a tough battle today.

Navy took a 7-0 lead late in the second period against William and Mary, after failing to score in the first quarter. Receiving a W&M punt on the 29, the Midshipmen moved the ball eight yards on a pass from Bob Cameron to Dean Smith; Smith carried the ball around his own left end for a first down on the Navy 41. Cameron passed to Fred Franco for 17 yards; Smith toted for another first down on the W&M 35 and Cameron again passed to Smith, carrying the ball to the Indians' 17. On the next play, Franco moved around his right end, was charged, lateraled to Frank Brady, and Brady ran the last 10 yards for the score. Ned Snyder added the extra point.

The only other score of the game was in the third period when, right after the kickoff, W&M punted to the Navy 12. Smith ran for 23, Brady picked up another three yards, Cameron passed to Jack Anderson on a play which was good for 40 yards, and Franco went across from the three-yard line.

The Navy lineup:

Center—Olson, Sieber, Duinell.
Right guard—Horse, Aronis, Knutowski.
Right tackle—Leach, Webster.
Right end—Tiede, Hempel, Anderson.

Col. Higgins, Hickam C.O.

Command of Hickam AFB, Hawaii, and the 1500th Air Base Wing passed recently from Col. Joseph B. Duckworth, USAF, to Col. Warren H. Higgins, USAF.

Rear Adm. John M. Hoskins, USN, commander of the Pacific Division, Military Air Transport Service, acted in the capacity of reviewing officer for the parade. Guests included the Admiral's staff and staff officers of the 1500th Air Base Wing. Col. Gerry L. Mason, who heads the 1500th Operations Squadron, was commander of troops.

Colonel Duckworth, a command pilot with more than 13,000 flying hours to his credit, has been in command of Hickam AFB since 19 March 1951. He will return to the mainland with Mrs. Duckworth and their three children late this month for hospitalization and treatment of a leg ailment.

Serving with the Air Training Command during World War II, Colonel Duckworth designed and carried through a completely new system of instrument flying training. He established the first instrument flying instructors' school at Bryan, Tex., in 1943. In 1945, when the second such school was built at Lubbock, Tex., he took command of the 77th Flying Training Wing, which administered both schools.

While at Bryan, during the summer of 1943, Colonel Duckworth was the first man to fly through the "eye" of a hurricane. He made two flights through the devastating Texas storm in an AT-6 trainer, making observations of conditions in and around the storm center.

Colonel Higgins, the new wing commander, has served since June 1950, as comptroller for the Pacific Division of MATS. From 13 Jan. 1951 until Colonel Duckworth's arrival on 19 March, he was also interim commander of the 1500th Air Transport Wing.

COL. DONALD J. M. BLAKESLEE

Commanding officer of the 27th Fighter-Escort Wing, shown ready for takeoff from Travis AFB, Calif., on the first leg of a mass flight across the Pacific by Republic F-84G Thunderjet fighter-bombers of the Strategic Air Command.

The flight of 47 F-84G's landed at an air base in Northern Japan 13 Oct., the last leg from Midway to Japan having been the longest over-water flight ever made by single-engined jet fighters. The 2,500-mile trip was made at an average speed of 460 miles an hour, with refueling at sea from Boeing C-97D flying tankers.

Lay Plans For $30 Million Texas Aeromedical Center

Plans for construction of a $30,000,000 Aeromedical Center at Brooks AFB, Tex., already authorized by Congress, are expected to be completed by 1 April 1953, with ground-breaking tentatively scheduled shortly afterwards.

From the USAF School of Aviation Medicine at Randolph AFB, Tex., comes word that Brig. Gen. Otis O. Benson, jr., commandant, has named his former deputy commandant, Col. Frederick J. Frese, jr., to head the planning group.

Colonel Frese, who has been at the School of Aviation Medicine since 1946, was largely responsible for explaining the necessity for the new Center to officials in Washington during the past year.

According to Representative Paul Kilday (D-Tex.), influential member of the House Armed Services Committee, $8,000,000 to begin construction will be available next year.

The Aeromedical Center, it is expected, will be similar to the Naval Medical Center at Bethesda, Md., and the Army Medical Center at Washington, D. C.

As two of his assistants, Colonel Frese has been assigned officers who completed earlier tours of duty at the USAF School of Aviation Medicine only a few months ago. Lt. Col. Vincent M. Downey, former head of the department of Internal Medicine, was a wartime surgeon in North Africa and Italy, where he took part in five combat bombing missions. For the past year, he has been director of clinical medicine for the branch of the School at Gunter AFB, Ala.

Maj. Seymour Schwartz was General Benson's adjutant until last January, when he was transferred to the Air Research and Development Command in Baltimore. An experienced medical administrator, he served in hospitals in England, North Africa, and Europe during the War. For a time he was in the office of the Air Force Surgeon General.

The fourth member of the planning quartet is Maj. Hubert B. Hodges, a former Army engineer who spent four and a half years dealing with mines and demolition in the European Theatre. His last assignment, like Colonel Downey's, was at Gunter AFB, as air installations officer.

Advanced Aero-Med. Course

A select group of 11 Air Force medical officers is registered this year for the advanced class in aeromedical procedures at the School of Aviation Medicine. The course started 6 Oct. at the Randolph Field institution, and will continue through June 1953.

Three of the students enter the School from Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore, where they have already completed the second half of the two-year curriculum. All three are rated Air Force pilots who served in World War II, as well as doctors. They are Capt. Robert H. Adams, Kay R. Cutler, and Alonzo M. Donnell, jr.

Capt. James H. Stuteville, who spent 15 wartime months in Africa as a statistical control officer, before he studied medicine is one of four officers assigned to the class directly from the 11-week primary course at the School. The others are Maj. Arthur V. Dudley, jr. and Capt. Lawrence T. Odland, and William G. Sanford.

Maj. Charles B. Marshall, jr., was advisor on aviation medicine to the Government of Ecuador. Maj. Norman I. Condit has served as a medical officer on the island of Guam. Maj. David I. Mahoney, jr. and Capt. Robert W. Black are the remaining members of the class.

Overseas Housing

cerning the hardships now confronting military personnel overseas:

"When the Air Force set about this worldwide base construction job not quite two years ago, it properly attached an overriding priority to the strictly operational aspects. We put all the emphasis on runways, storage and fueling systems, and the other technical gear that would make it possible, in the event of an emergency, for us to go into action anywhere in the world at a moment's notice.

"That was the right decision. But I have begun to think that we have carried this spartan approach too far. It is time that we began to give more attention to easing the hardships imposed upon our fellow citizens who occupy these bases, especially in the more remote parts of the world. Where the simpler creature comforts are concerned, especially as regards housing and recreational facilities, we have been something less generous—almost stingy. At Wheelus Field in Tripoli, and indeed at Toul, Chaumont, and Laon, our people are living under conditions distinctly below what they should be required to accept.

"The men at these bases are living in tents, some for the second year. The tents at the French bases will be insulated before cold weather sets in.

"These austere standards reflect the Air Force's determination to hold down its operating costs, even at painful inconvenience to its own people. But inasmuch as we shall probably have to maintain our people in these and similar places for some years to come, I am of the opinion that the country, which is to say the Congress, ought to be willing to do better by them.

"In the interest of preserving the peace we Americans are now engaged in a great experiment without precedent in our history. In an era of peace we are sending large numbers of our youth into the different corners of the earth, to live in military camps and endure unfamiliar privations. I am not impressed with the argument that because a young man is serving his country he should be prepared to forego all recreation except what he is able to provide for himself.

"A certain amount of dubious humor has been had at the expense of the military on the score of swimming pools, tennis courts and golf courses. Sure, there is a swimming pool on the base at Dhahran, on the Persian Gulf. But if you have any doubts as to the propriety of that particular swimming pool, I suggest you try the delightful climate of Dhahran, where the mean summer temperature is on the order of 115 degrees and the humidity usually stands close to 90 per cent. . . .

"Actually, more is involved in this question than merely the comforts of the men themselves. The quartering of large numbers of American troops in foreign communities for an indefinite period is already giving rise to problems of social interrelationship that could develop serious political overtones. We must be more sensitive about the feelings of our friends. Better living conditions for our own people on their bases, more recreational facilities for their spare time, will have the beneficial effect of easing the social strains which the presence of our garrisons has occasioned in many foreign communities. Speaking only for the Air Force, I should like to see prevail throughout our world base structure much the same congenial community relationship that has gradually developed in the United Kingdom."

Separation Counseling

The Air Force has told commanders in the field that in many cases proper and adequate counseling has not been given to honorably discharged veterans concerning rights and privileges.

A new pamphlet, "Separation Counseling," is being printed for distribution to all installations this month. Designed as a reference handout, the pamphlet will be given to each separatee.

European Air Research

The European Research Office of the Air Force's Air Research and Development Command started operating on 15 Oct. in Brussels, Belgium, Lt. Gen. Earle E. Partridge, commanding general of the Air Research and Development Command, announced this week.

This Brussels Office operating as part of ARDC's Office of Scientific Research will contract for research in Western Europe and monitor Air Force research and development contracts already established in Europe. The office will be the sole research and development contracting and procurement office in Europe for ARDC and its nine Centers located throughout the United States. The Office of Scientific Research, located here at ARDC Headquarters, is under the direction of Col. O. G. Haywood, jr.

Chief of the European Office is Maj. Ralph J. Nunziato, a graduate of Daniel Guggenheim School of Aeronautics of New York University, who had been assigned to USAF Headquarters in Washington, D. C., since 1947.

Other staff members are: Maj. George Gogel, procurement officer; Capt. Constantine Svimonoff, technical officer; and Chief Warrant Officer Candido Suarez, administration officer.

Marine General Golf Champ

At the recent tournament held at Del Monte, Calif., the championship of the California State Seniors' Golf Association was won by Brig. Gen. Stanley E. Ridderhof, USMC-Ret. General Ridderhof got off a recent sick bed to come within two strokes of equalling the tournament record, with two sterling rounds of 75 each over two championship courses. He found himself tied with Carl Haymon of Los Angeles at the end of the 36-hole test and continued his capable brand of "power" golf into the playoff with a 79 to Haymon's 80.

The winner came in first in a star-studded field of 250 golfers, in which one, two, three, and even four stars shone on the shoulders of almost every foursome. Notables of the Army, Navy and Marine Corps included Adm. Wm. H. Standley, Lt. Gen. W. D. Styer, Adm. John Paul Owen, Adm. Jesse B. Oldendorf, Adm. George Murray, all retired; Col. Russell H. Davis, USMC-Ret., Col. Wm. E. Donegan, USA-Ret., Col. Owen R. Meredith, USA-Ret., Col. Charles R. Sergeant, USA-Ret., and Col. Warren J. Clear, USA-Ret.

One of the guests of the tournament was Maj. Gen. Robert B. McClure, commanding Ft. Ord, Calif., and another distinguished guest was Vice Adm. James L. Hall, commanding the Western Sea Frontier.

The California Seniors' Golf Association now numbers 300, and 225 attended the annual dinner which followed the conclusion of the three days' play over the famous Cypress Point course, the historic old Del Monte course, and the Monterey Peninsula Country Club course. Good weather prevailed. The famous Hawaiian sportsman, Francis H. I. Brown, gave a cocktail party for the three hundred seniors and their families at his beautiful home in Agujito Rancho.

Separation for Marriage

The Army has issued Circular No. 86 which authorizes the separation of female officers because of marriage. The Air Force has issued a similar policy. Here is the pertinent excerpt prescribing rules for the release of Army Reserve and Regular women officers who are married:

"Female officers of the Reserve components serving on active duty who are married may request relief from active duty or tender their resignation solely because of marriage provided they have completed 24 months of commissioned service in current tour (24 months of active service in the case of warrant officers) and provided they have no unfulfilled commitment for service following completion of a course of instruction at a service school or civilian educational institution.

"Female officers of the Regular Army who are married may tender their resignation solely because of marriage provided they have completed 24 months of continuous active commissioned service (24 months of active service in the case of warrant officers) and provided, in accordance with the standards established for Reserve officers, they have no unfulfilled commitment for service following the completion of a course of instruction at a service school or civilian educational institution.

"Subject to the requirements of the service a tender of resignation or request for relief from active duty submitted in accordance with the foregoing will normally be approved. Those officers who are serving in an overseas command will not be separated prior to completion of 1 year of their overseas tour.

"Requests for separation under this policy will be approved only by the Department of the Army."

Gen. Garland Heads ATIC

Brig. Gen. William M. Garland, USAF, former assistant for production in the Directorate of Intelligence at Air Force Headquarters, has been named to head the Air Technical Intelligence Center (ATIC) at Wright-Patterson AFB, Ohio. He succeeds Col. Frank L. Dunn, who leaves to attend the Air War College at the Air University, Montgomery, Ala.

During World War II, General Garland served a year of temporary duty in England and in 1943 was assigned to the Eighth Bomber Command in the European theater. He became a staff operations officer with the Eighth Air Force in 1944. Later that year, General Garland returned to the United States to become deputy commander of Langley AFB, Va., where he served until April 1945. He was next assigned to Air Force headquarters in Washington to begin a two year tour of duty in various posts including deputy chief of the training division and deputy to the assistant chief of air staff for operations.

He left Washington in 1947 to enter the Air War college and, upon graduation a year later, became assistant commandant of the USAF Bombardier School at Mather AFB, Calif. He took over command of the 3535th bomb training group there in March, 1949.

In June, 1951, after graduation from a year-long course at the National War College, General Garland was named chief of the air targets division in the Directorate of Intelligence at USAF headquarters. He became the directorate's production assistant in October 1951.

"I am not impressed with the argument that because a young man is serving his country he should be prepared to forego all recreation except what he is able to provide for himself."—SECRETARY OF THE AIR FORCE THOMAS K. FINLETTER.

Housing Abroad. The 83d Congress should get an early start on the re-examination "of the whole question of what constitutes a proper standard of living" for all Service personnel abroad and at home. Secretary of the Air Force Thomas K. Finletter announced this week that he is proposing such a study for Air Force personnel stationed abroad. This is most vitally needed. It will be recalled that the world-wide air base program was undertaken two years ago when the Communist inspired North Koreans attacked their southern neighbors and aroused grave fears in the free world that Russia might enter upon armed aggression on a wider scale. The determination was made then that no effort be spared to establish air bases capable of operations at the earliest possible moment. To do this no money or time was given to anything that did not contribute directly to servicing aircraft and getting them off the ground. The men in many instances lived in tents—in the Moroccan bases they are still living in tents, some for the second year. Now the time has come to give thought and action to the care and comfort of the officers and airmen performing their duties thousands of miles from home. This means both housing and recreational facilities. Not only will it improve their morale but it will also serve to lessen the social strains in those strange and far-away communities.

At the same time it would be well for Congress to give thought to the entire housing problem of all the Services at home and abroad. Makeshifts, high rents and substandard quarters can no longer be condoned as a temporary necessity. No one still believes the emergency or cold war will be of short duration. To preserve peace and to be prepared to counter aggression there must be large military forces in being for a great many years. Many thousands of young men will be serving tours in the Services as both officers and enlisted men. The normal rigors of military life should not be intensified by forcing them and their dependents to live under conditions considerably worse than they would be if they were home.

New Artillery Piece. The Red Army, which prides itself so highly upon the quantity and quality of its artillery, must be showing considerable interest in the new 11-inch mobile artillery piece demonstrated this week at Aberdeen Proving Ground. In World War II the Red Army made more use, proportionately, of masses of artillery than did the other armies engaged. It is known that since then their factories and foundries have been heavily engaged in the manufacture of artillery.

Our new weapon, developed by the Army Ordnance Corps, appears to be far beyond that of other land armies. The fact that it is capable of firing atomic charges makes it probably the most advanced land weapon in actual production. Its high mobility, long range and pin-point accuracy put it in a class of its own.

The design and manufacture of the first few is a great achievement. The goal now must be to produce them in quantities enough for issuance to using troops and for the reserve.

New Pay Study. It is to be hoped that the study of special hazard and incentive pay, already under way, will not take precedence over the overall readjustment recommended by Assistant Secretary of Defense Rosenberg with the approval and support of Secretary Lovett. The latter readjustment is necessary to bring the Services more into line with the increases already given to industry and to civilian employees of the Government. The half-strength increase granted to the Services by the 82d Congress was considerably below that accorded other categories of government employees and woefully insufficient to meet the risen cost of living. Its prompt readjustment should be given first priority in the new Congress.

What About Technical Officers?

EDITOR, THE JOURNAL:
We note with interest the list of those recommended for promotion to Colonel. Some degree of concern accompanies our interest. An examination of the list shows that those contemporaries selected were apparently given the nod because of outstanding combat records. We necessarily applaud the choices made. However, we recall to mind the often stated promise from many levels including a recent one from the Secretary of Defense to the effect "those officers who go into technical fields will be given equal opportunities for advancement and promotion..." Those of us who took heed of this promise and spent two or four years in graduate study, years teaching at the Military Academy, and years in development work fail to see any evidence of the equal opportunities. Experience as an infantry commander for a few months seems to carry more weight than an MS or PhD.

There is no doubt that the combat arms need both the combat commander and the technical man. This is especially true in the Artillery where complex equipment is the order of the day. Surely officers who share a large part of the responsibility for design, testing, and making final recommendations on equipment whose total costs run into many millions cannot be second rate officers. We would like to see some evidence that we should stay in our technical field or should we hurry out with the troops to protect our future and let someone else worry about the equipment the troops get.

Retirement in Rhyme

EDITOR, THE JOURNAL:
Current events have stimulated the following "Out of Active Service" with apologies to Rudyard Kipling and his poem "Back to the Army Again":

I did my thirty years' service. The Pentagon said: "Good day—
You'll please to come when you're rung for, and here's your retired pay;
Three-quarters of your active — and blooming generous, too;
And now you can make your fortune—the same as your generals do."
The Secretary expressed his appreciation—a paragraph on this dwelt,
For "many years meritorious service" and a loss which "will be keenly felt."
The form letter ended with a kind assurance—a departmental approbation—
That a desire for earlier retirement would "receive every consideration."
A man of seven and fifty that hasn't learned of a trade—
Beside "Retired" against him — he'd better be never made.

I tried my luck for a quarter, and that was enough for me,
And I thought of the military prep schools, and I thought I'd go and see.
The "head" asked some questions, then he winked his other eye,
He said to me, "Why aren't you a general, the same as the other guy, Seventeen years as a louie, My God, were you dumb!" said he,

"And you expect me to be interested, you with only a colonelcy."
I bit my tongue and thanked him, but felt knee high to a duck—
A civilian wouldn't know that promotions were often a matter of luck.
I used to be proud of the Army and thought it quite a career,
But realized now how I'd muffed it—no use to cry in my beer.

I remembered my years in the Army, before promotion was fast and on time;

Senate by its Committee on Armed Services at a time when that body was just on the verge of adopting a series of crippling amendments proposed by Senator Paul H. Douglas (D-Ill.) who sought to make drastic reductions in flight pay, overseas pay and other categories.

The composition of the new civilian commission appointed by Secretary Lovett to study the extra pay structure, as reported in last week's issue of THE JOURNAL, would seem to assure a thorough and sympathetic treatment. Business men and industrialists are accustomed to salary differentials based on night work, extra hazards, overtime, long absences from home, and many other factors far beyond those given in the Armed Services and, thus, may be expected to look with understanding on those specially applicable to the Armed Services. The difficulties will arise when it comes under attack from those in Congress who are hostile to the Services or who believe in economy at any price.

IN THE JOURNAL

10 Years Ago—

The effectiveness of both aircraft and surface vessel is being emphasized in the communiques on the day and night actions in the Solomon Islands.

50 Years Ago—

With the gradual reduction of the Army in the Philippines, considerations of economy and a proper regard for the physical and moral welfare of the troops retained in the islands require that the men shall be established in permanent quarters where the hardships of service in a trying climate may be reduced to the minimum.

85 Years Ago—

The Indians are demanding discontinuance of roads through their country, and removal of military posts and white settlers. An unwise yielding on these points would only lead to a temporary peace, to be soon followed by a renewal of the outrages of the past year accompanied by still more impudent demands.

When colonels had two grades above them, and a captain was considered sublime;
When rank had both responsibilities and privileges, and a brief case was unknown;
When the Pentagon was not in existence, and could not be considered as home. But now in the present day scramble—promotions, decorations and such—
When colonels have five grades above and below them, and not considered as much;
There's something wrong with the system — no matter how hard a man strives;
The majority will end in the middle and that makes a mess of their lives.
Youth is now in the saddle — the "old men" are pushed aside;
The young are eager and restless—are getting into their stride;
But they too will soon have thirty, together with five years in grade;
Then the "old men" can laugh and chuckle and watch as they also fade.

Utilize Glider Pilots

EDITOR, THE JOURNAL:
In a recent issue of the ARMY NAVY AIR FORCE JOURNAL, it was noted that the Tactical Air Command was activating Liaison Squadrons. It stated that several small type aircraft would be assigned to these squadrons in addition to helicopters. There are several glider pilots currently on active duty who are not on flying status but would be qualified to fill the duties of a Liaison pilot in these squadrons.

Therefore, believe it would be advantageous to the Air Force, as well as a saving of money and qualified fighter, transport and bomber pilots, if these glider pilots would be returned to flying status and assigned to duty as pilots in these squadrons.

Service Families Lose Franchise

MORE than one out of every three Servicemen of voting age will not be able to cast a ballot this year because of failure of Congress and the States to simplify absentee voting procedures, according to a comprehensive analysis of G. I. Balloting, published in the 12 Oct. issue of The New York Times.

It is estimated that of some 2,525,000 men and women in uniform who are of voting age, at least 1,000,000 will be disfranchised.

This does not include thousands of dependents overseas, who also will find it impossible to vote this year. During World War II, the problem of voting rights for military dependents was not nearly as important as is the case today when military families are living in all parts of the world.

Tabulating difficulties being experienced by Defense officials concerned with monitoring the absentee ballot program, the newspaper article notes that 28 States do not meet all four of the criteria set forth by the American Political Science Association after a study of voting by military personnel. Two states, New Mexico and South Carolina, do not permit absentee voting and four States, Louisiana, Delaware, Florida and Alabama require registration in person. Ten other States require that application be made by use of a special form, while Minnesota does not permit the mailing of absentee ballots until 12 days before Election Day.

As an example of the absentee voting difficulties, Austin Stevens, Pentagon correspondent for the New York Times, reports that Nevada insists a serviceman mark his ballot with a specially inked rubber stamp that accompanies it. If the stamp is lost—perhaps on the fighting front in Korea—and the ballot is marked in pen or pencil, the Serviceman's vote will not be counted.

The G. I. Ballot study observes that the Armed Forces Information and Education Division "has labored long and hard to present as clearly as possible to the individual soldier what he must do in order to vote."

Voting officers have been well supplied with information about the intricacies of voting laws in the various States; posters have been distributed; a motion picture has been made on the privilege and duty of voting; and continual announcements are being made over the stations of the Armed Forces Radio Network.

But notwithstanding these efforts, the plain fact is that servicemen and their families, by the thousands, will be disfranchised this year, solely because of the fact that they are in uniform.

It is conceivable that the Department of Defense, with the problem fresh in mind, will call upon the 83d Congress to take remedial action. But on the basis of the past record, it is not likely that the problem will receive the attention it deserves. The normal procedure for Congress and the States has been to put off action in off-election years because "there's no hurry" and then during election years fail to pass necessary legislation because "there's not enough time."

Possibly, the American Political Science Association, having made a study of the problem this year, will carry the fight to safeguard the voting rights of Servicemen.

End Maneuvers in Germany

ALLIED field maneuvers in occupied Germany are nearly over for this year, and four of the Soviet's armies in East Germany have gone to winter quarters, leaving only two to complete their exercises in the next three weeks. Appraisals of Allied troop units' performance are generally favorable, and both General J. Lawton Collins, lately back from Europe, and General Matthew B. Ridgway, who is staying there for quite a time, have spoken in extraordinarily warm terms of French forces' outstanding merit. This is gratifying, and also timely evidence that, despite the field disasters of 1940 and the discouragements of later years and the distractions of IndoChina, America's "oldest ally" as we affectionately referred to France in 1917 is capable of superior work aground and aloft in 1952. We now move toward winter quarters ourselves, and back into the intensive individual and small-unit training which Lt. Gen. Manton S. Eddy as Seventh U.S. Army commander carried on so vigorously last winter as to be reflected in summer successes.

The striking thing about Russian ground and air forces' activities in East Germany this year, from April to October, is that there was no appreciable build-up. The total seems to have been about 300,000 men, which is short of the Allied total in West Germany, although not too much should be made of that fact, when one recalls the comparative numbers of available reinforcements in each case. At least, the lack of a build-up discouraged fresh attacks of nervousness on the part of Allied commanders, European civilians, and faraway Americans alike, already overexcited by seasonal political fever.

Informal remarks by Admiral Robert B. Carney, commanding the Southern Sector, indicate measured satisfaction with progress in the Southeastern Command; Lt. Gen. Willard Wyman has barely begun the establishment of his headquarters near Smyrna (just in time to have our tariff on Smyrna figs hoisted in a most tactless manner, a melancholy observer notes) and the air establishment across the straits near Salonika is still newer, so that progress is necessarily limited. But the start is favorable, and the record of our missions' work both in Greece and Turkey since 1947 is so good as to encourage the belief that, despite political disturbance, this most easterly outpost of NATO will be firmly set by spring.

Support for that Near East hope is lent by the past week's decision by Britain, France and the United States to proceed with their economic aid to nearby Yugoslavia, to the extent of nearly $100,000,000, and the announcement that the first $30,000,000 of American aid (this country giving $78,000,000 in all) is already allocated. Assistance was urgent by reason of the summer's killing drought which flattened Yugoslavia's normal granary and made necessary the immediate import of cereals and fats in quantity. This has nothing to do with arms contributions to Tito, but may be much more important so far as immediate effect is concerned.

The wisdom of our extending material aid to Europe, including $400,000,000 ($225,000,000 of it American) for financing airplane construction in Britain, France, Italy, Holland, and Belgium, is suggested by the Mutual Security Administration's announcement of last Tuesday that 1,400 new-type jet fighters will be produced by those countries' factories within two years. This is part of the picture; the rest is that the factories will remain, capable of continuing or enlarging this production and relieving American factories of that possible responsibility, above their American orders.

The unfortunate flurry in Paris over the rejected American "note" to France has died away with French honor intact and American feathers fairly well smoothed out. The "note" was not a note at all, but a purely off-record reminder of what was to have been stated orally, and could have been stated orally without offense. But it took an extraordinarily long time to have that understood and in the meantime M. Pinay (with a good many political issues already roweling him) had communicated some of his own anguish to the French press. The silver lining is now visible; M. Pinay has demonstrated his nation's independence, and thereby seems to have won support for his international program, which is very much to our satisfaction. It's an ill wind, etc., in France as elsewhere.

USSR Calls For Support of World Communists

A PLEDGE of Russian support to Communist parties working inside other nations and a demand that they, in turn, be loyal to the Soviet Union highlighted the speech of Prime Minister Josef Stalin closing the 19th Communist Party Congress 15 Oct. in Moscow. "The party and our country," Stalin declared, "always needed and will need the trust, sympathy and support of fraternal peoples abroad."

Stalin mentioned both the French Communist leader Thorez, who attended the conference, and the Italian Communist leader Togliatti and commended their stand to prevent their peoples from opposing Russia. "That is support," he said, "first of all support to the workers and peasants of France and Italy fighting for peace, and also support for the peace-loving efforts of the Soviet Union."

THE UNITED NATIONS' GENERAL ASSEMBLY convened in its new plush quarters in New York the day before the Communist Congress adjourned. Expectations that Secretary of State Dean Acheson would open the program with an address urging the Assembly to appeal to the Communists to accept the UN proposals for an armistice in Korea were not fulfilled, for Mr. Acheson, apparently at the last moment, decided to postpone his speech until later in the week. Meanwhile there seems to be every indication that Russian Foreign Minister Vishinsky will come up with a Soviet plan for bringing about a truce in Korea.

Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko proposed that the assembly's steering committee recommend that the Political and Security Committee take up as its first business the report of the UN Commission for the Unification and Rehabilitation of Korea. Lester B. Pearson, president of the General Assembly, said that the Political and Security Committee would make its own decision on priority of business and Mr. Gromyko let the matter drop there. While the United States delegation did not comment on this move it is generally believed that they will not oppose making the Korean item the first on the list (it was originally the third). In fact, there is some belief that the U. S. originally wanted Korea to come up first.

The Steering Committee did approve for debate a motion by Brazil that the Assembly appeal to the four major powers to conclude a treaty with Austria. This is bitterly opposed by the USSR.

Another issue casting its shadow over the UN sessions is that of the appeal of Tunisia and Morocco for UN support of their demands for more home rule and less colonial government by France. The French Government is opposed to the matter being discussed in the Assembly at all. In fact, Premier Pinay has made it perfectly clear that he will consider any such discussion as "interference" with France's domestic affairs. France, he declared, will not take part in any debate on the subject and would exclude from her possessions any study or investigation group the UN might decide to send.

THE UNITED STATES, on the other hand, fears that a wrangle over the North African colonies might drive the western nations and the Arab-Asian nations farther apart just at a time when we might need the support of the latter group in the Korean debate. Britain already has made it clear that she will follow the French on the Tunisian matter, thus putting the United States in the position where it may well be that our stand would be decisive. Should our attitude result in an Assembly rebuke to France there is no doubt but that it would fortify French opposition to participation in the European Defense Community.

IN ENGLAND Prime Minister Churchill, referring to the Russian forecasts of trouble between the Allies, declared that his country intends to "persevere faithfully and resolutely in strengthening the ties of friendship and kinship which have brought us into such effective alliance with the great English-speaking republic across the Atlantic Ocean. Upon this the future peace of the world and the survival of its freedom depend." He added that this "does not mean that we always find ourselves in complete agreement with our American allies or that we should hesitate to press our views on matters about which we differ." In his address, made before the closing session of the Conservative Party's annual conference, the Prime Minister also said there is "a general feeling in the world" that the danger of a new global war is lessening.

THE SHOOTING DOWN by Russian fighters of an unarmed American B-29 in northern Japanese waters was a repetition of the pattern the USSR followed in attacking aircraft in Europe. In this instance, there seems, however, to be a further issue of jurisdiction. The Soviet note admitting the shooting placed the action near Yuri, an island in the Habomai chain just off northern Japan, and made the assumption that Yuri is part of the Kurile Islands which USSR occupies. The United States places Yuri in Japanese waters and recognizes no claim of the Soviets to jurisdiction over it. Russian claims that the B-29 had violated Russian territory were sharply rejected by the U. S. State Department, which is expected to follow this with demands for indemnity. Like action was taken when the Russians shot down an unarmed Navy airplane in the Baltic area. Russia not only rejected those demands but brazenly decorated the Red fighter pilots for their action. Most likely they will take similar action in the present incident.

A $400,000,000 PROGRAM to build jet fighter aircraft in five European countries was announced this week by the Mutual Security Agency. The funds, mostly American, would be employed to set up assembly lines in Great Britain, France, Italy, Holland and Belgium. Plans call for 1,400 aircraft within 18 to 24 months. Some of the fighters would remain in the countries manufacturing them; others would be allotted to other North Atlantic Treaty nations.

Of the total $225,000,000 would come out of United States "off shore" purchase appropriations and the remainder will be provided by the five participating countries and certain others who contribute in order to get an apportionment of the new plants. The original allocation of American money was to be distributed as follows: to France, $86,000,000 for 300 Mystere IV fighters; to Britain, $69,000,000 for 500 Armstrong-Vickers Swifts; to Italy, $26,000,000 for 300 to 400 British-designed Venoms; and to Holland and Belgium together, $42,000,000 for 500 Swifts to be built under British license.

Great Britain this week declined to pay the $56 million asked by Iranian Premier Mossadegh as the price for receiving an Anglo-Iranian Oil Company mission. Mossadegh suggested that Britain pay this sum as part payment on the $137 millions he claims they owe on account of an oil contract revision in 1949.

Also this week Russia rejected the United States protest over their treatment of our Ambassador George Kennan. Tass reported that the Russian note called the American protest a worthless effort to justify a false and hostile statement by Kennan. Meanwhile, Kennan stays in Europe.

SERVICE NEWS AND GOSSIP

Proposed JCS Changes Certain Controversy—Discussion is increasing at the Pentagon on elaborate proposals for reorganization of the Joint Chiefs of Staff advanced by Dr. Vannevar Bush, President of Carnegie Institution. There is no doubt that strong controversy will manifest itself when Dr. Bush's plan is presented before the Senate or House Armed Services Committee.

Dr. Bush maintains that the JCS should become exclusively a planning organization with no command function. He says that the JCS Chairman should be given increased authority and declares that the Chairman should resolve all disagreement.

Dr. Bush's carefully worked out analysis of what he considers to be shortcomings in the top-level military echelons and his plan to solve these problems are reported in detail in THE JOURNAL issues of 4 and 11 Oct.

It is understood that Dr. Bush's detailed plan for reorganization of the JCS is supported, in a number of aspects, by the top civilian and military leaders of the Department of Defense, Secretary Robert A. Lovett and General of the Army Omar N. Bradley, JCS Chairman. The likelihood is that these officials find some particulars in Dr. Bush's plan with which they do not agree, but can be expected to support many major arguments advanced by the noted scientist.

In general, the Army and Air Force would be more inclined to indorse Dr. Bush's contention that the JCS Chairman should be given added authority than the Navy, which throughout the history of Unification discussions has resisted granting of power to a single military officer. Navy opposition to Dr. Bush's arguments is predicted, notwithstanding the fact that the current Chief of Naval Operations, Admiral William M. Fechteler, USN, could very well become the next JCS Chairman after General Bradley's second two-year term expires in August.

Another factor which must be taken into consideration is Dr. Bush's failure to discuss the role to be assumed by the Commandant of the Marine Corps. From the omission of the Marine Corps in his two speeches, the assumption is that Dr. Bush does not feel the Commandant should be a member of the JCS. However, the 82d Congress passed overwhelmingly legislation to make the Marine Corps Commandant a member of the JCS whenever matters pertaining to the Marine Corps are discussed. During recent months, General Lemuel C. Shepherd, Marine Corps Commandant, or Lt. Gen. Gerald C. Thomas, Assistant Commandant, have been frequent participants in JCS debates.

It is recalled that when Unification was first discussed, the Army's position was that there should be a single Chief of Staff. The Navy argued strongly against such centralization of authority. There was no separate Air Force at that time. A compromise was effected, with no JCS Chairman at first and then subsequently the adoption of an amendment to the National Security Act providing for a Chairman.

Now, Dr. Bush wants to go another step and give to this Chairman full authority to resolve disagreements. His idea is that the JCS should be a super-planning organization does not coincide with the Navy philosophy of avoiding a strong General Staff type group in Washington. At one time, the Navy General Board did function as something of a super-planning agency, but it was quietly disbanded several years ago.

The Navy's contention that there should be a minimum centralization of authority, expressed strongly during the first Unification discussions and more forcefully during the B-36 controversy in 1949, has not changed materially. Therefore, it can be stated as a certainty that the Navy will resist the sweeping changes in the JCS organization urged by Dr. Bush.

There is some possibility that critics of Dr. Bush's plan will contend that his proposal should not be the decisive word in military organization, particularly in view of past efforts in this field. Those who do not endorse his viewpoint as regards the JCS structure may point out that Dr. Bush had much to do with the organization of the Research and Development Board and the Weapons System Evaluation Group of the Department of Defense, and few would argue that these two agencies have been all that was expected of them.

However, there is no question that Dr. Bush has earned wide respect among military and civilian officials concerned with defense planning at the highest levels and his remarks, likely to be spelled out in greater detail in the next few months, will certainly receive careful scrutiny by appropriate Congressional committees next year.

What can be expected is a comprehensive review of the JCS organization, and in that process, considerable controversy.

Tiff Over "Strangle"—The Commandant of the Marine Corps and the Secretary of the Air Force returned recently from trips overseas with differing views on the efficacy of the Air Force's "Operation Strangle" in Korea. The divergent views were brought out by press correspondents at conferences held by the leaders upon their return.

General Shepherd in his meeting with press representatives commented that the Air Force had abandoned "Operation Strangle," the program designed to destroy enemy supply lines between their point of origin and the Korean front. Correspondents immediately began to press additional queries on the general. In the resultant cross-fire General Shepherd referred to the operation as a recognized "fizzle."

Subsequently at Air Force Secretary Thomas K. Finletter's press conference he was asked about the Marine Commandant's remarks. He denied that "Operation Strangle" had been discontinued or that it was a failure. He said "it hurt the enemy badly."

Although "it was obvious from the beginning," he said, "that the interdiction could never hope to achieve a classical effect," there was no question but that it "has hurt and continues to hurt the enemy." He said the large-scale intervention of MIG fighters deployed by the Communists after "Strangle" got underway was "almost certainly intended" to get the air interdiction campaign off the backs of the Communist armies.

Earlier in his report, Secretary Finletter praised the troops of the First Marine Division—the only front line ground element he visited in Korea. He said it was a "magnificent division" which was doing "splendid fighting." The Air Force Secretary added that he was gratified to observe "the spirit of brotherhood" existing between the Marines, the other ground elements with whom they are associated, and the air elements that support them.

...A proposal to give cash incentive awards to enlisted personnel and junior officers for MONEY-SAVING SUGGESTIONS has been vetoed at the Pentagon. U. S. Naval Academy—More than 140 flag officers were among the returning Alumni who visited the Naval Academy in connection with Homecoming activities last week-end. Two Fleet Admirals, William D. Leahy and William F. Halsey, registered early, as did four-star Admirals William H. Standley, Arthur J. Heburn, Henry K. Hewitt, Thomas C. Kinkaid, Harry W. Hill, Louis E. Denfeld, DeWitt C. Ramsey and Russell S. Berkey.

Other flag officers attending the reunion included 21 vice admirals, 95 rear admirals, 13 commodores, one major general and one brigadier general. The oldest alumnus at the homecoming was 90-year-old Rear Adm. William B. Fletcher, who graduated with the Class of 1882.

Fighting Duties for Women—For the first time in the history of the British Army, members of the Women's Royal Army Corps are on duty overseas in fighting assignments. A group of British Army women has been assigned to the 4th Heavy Anti-Aircraft Regiment, Royal Artillery at Gibraltar. The women spot aircraft and supply ranges; actual firing is done by men.

Airborne Training Aid

The first new major airborne training aid since 1942, the swing landing trainer, has been adopted by The Infantry School's Airborne Department at Ft. Benning, Ga.

The swing landing trainer will be used to teach students in the basic airborne course how to make proper parachute landing falls, according to Lt. Col. Woodrow N. Laws, Airborne Department executive officer.

This is the first new training apparatus adopted for use in instruction in the airborne course since the 34-foot mock tower was introduced in 1942. It will fill the gap in training between the four-foot landing platform and the 250-foot tower.

Built by the post Engineer Section, the swing landing trainer is based on a similar aid used in the Canadian Airborne School. It was constructed for less than $5,000.

The trainer, which consists of a platform 14 feet from the ground and four parachute harnesses attached to each side, is operated by a system of pulleys. The student is buckled into the harness, attached to a suspended metal ring. He then jumps from the platform and is allowed to swing free before being suddenly lowered to the ground to simulate the landing made in an actual parachute jump.

Praise Food Industry

tion with long-range flights requiring the crew to spend many hours, if not days, in the air. Other peculiar feeding problems, he said, developed from the capabilities of today's high-speed, high-altitude aircraft. The modern bomber developed the problem of hot food, together with the storage and cooking requirements. Even the feeding of the fighter pilot posed new problems, General Parker said.

However, the General emphasized that the Air Force's attention has not been confined to these so-called peculiar problems. It also has wanted improvements in mess hall feeding, he said, and this has required more scientific processing of food, and more economical cooking methods.

Adoption of these new concepts and methods were highly desirable, not only from an economic point of view, but also from a morale angle, according to General Parker. "It meant that the mess officer no longer could be the youngest, greenest, and latest 'shavetail' in the outfit. His replacement must be a highly trained and skilled technician—and expert in his field. Not only must he know the culinary arts—he must be a business manager as well."

In order to carry out the new concept, the Air Force set up new training courses, and the old courses were overhauled. Even new terminology was employed. The term "food service technician" was adopted. Even the well-worn term of "mess hall" stepped aside for the new term "dining hall."

He recommended that the students devote a portion of their time to seeking improvements over present methods and procedures. "Look with analytical inquisitiveness at every phase of activity under your control—whether it be an office procedure or kitchen operation. There is no procedure or function so finalized that it cannot be improved."

General Parker explained that food service in the Air Force is big business, with nearly a quarter of a billion dollars annually of the Air Force budget applied to it. The Air Force prepares and serves about 3,000,000 meals a day to more than 900,000 individuals. It has more than 1,450 dining halls, 55 central meat cutting plants, 75 pastry bakeries, 34 bread bakeries, 153 issue commissaries, and 131 sales commissaries.
